March, 2007

Dear Friend:

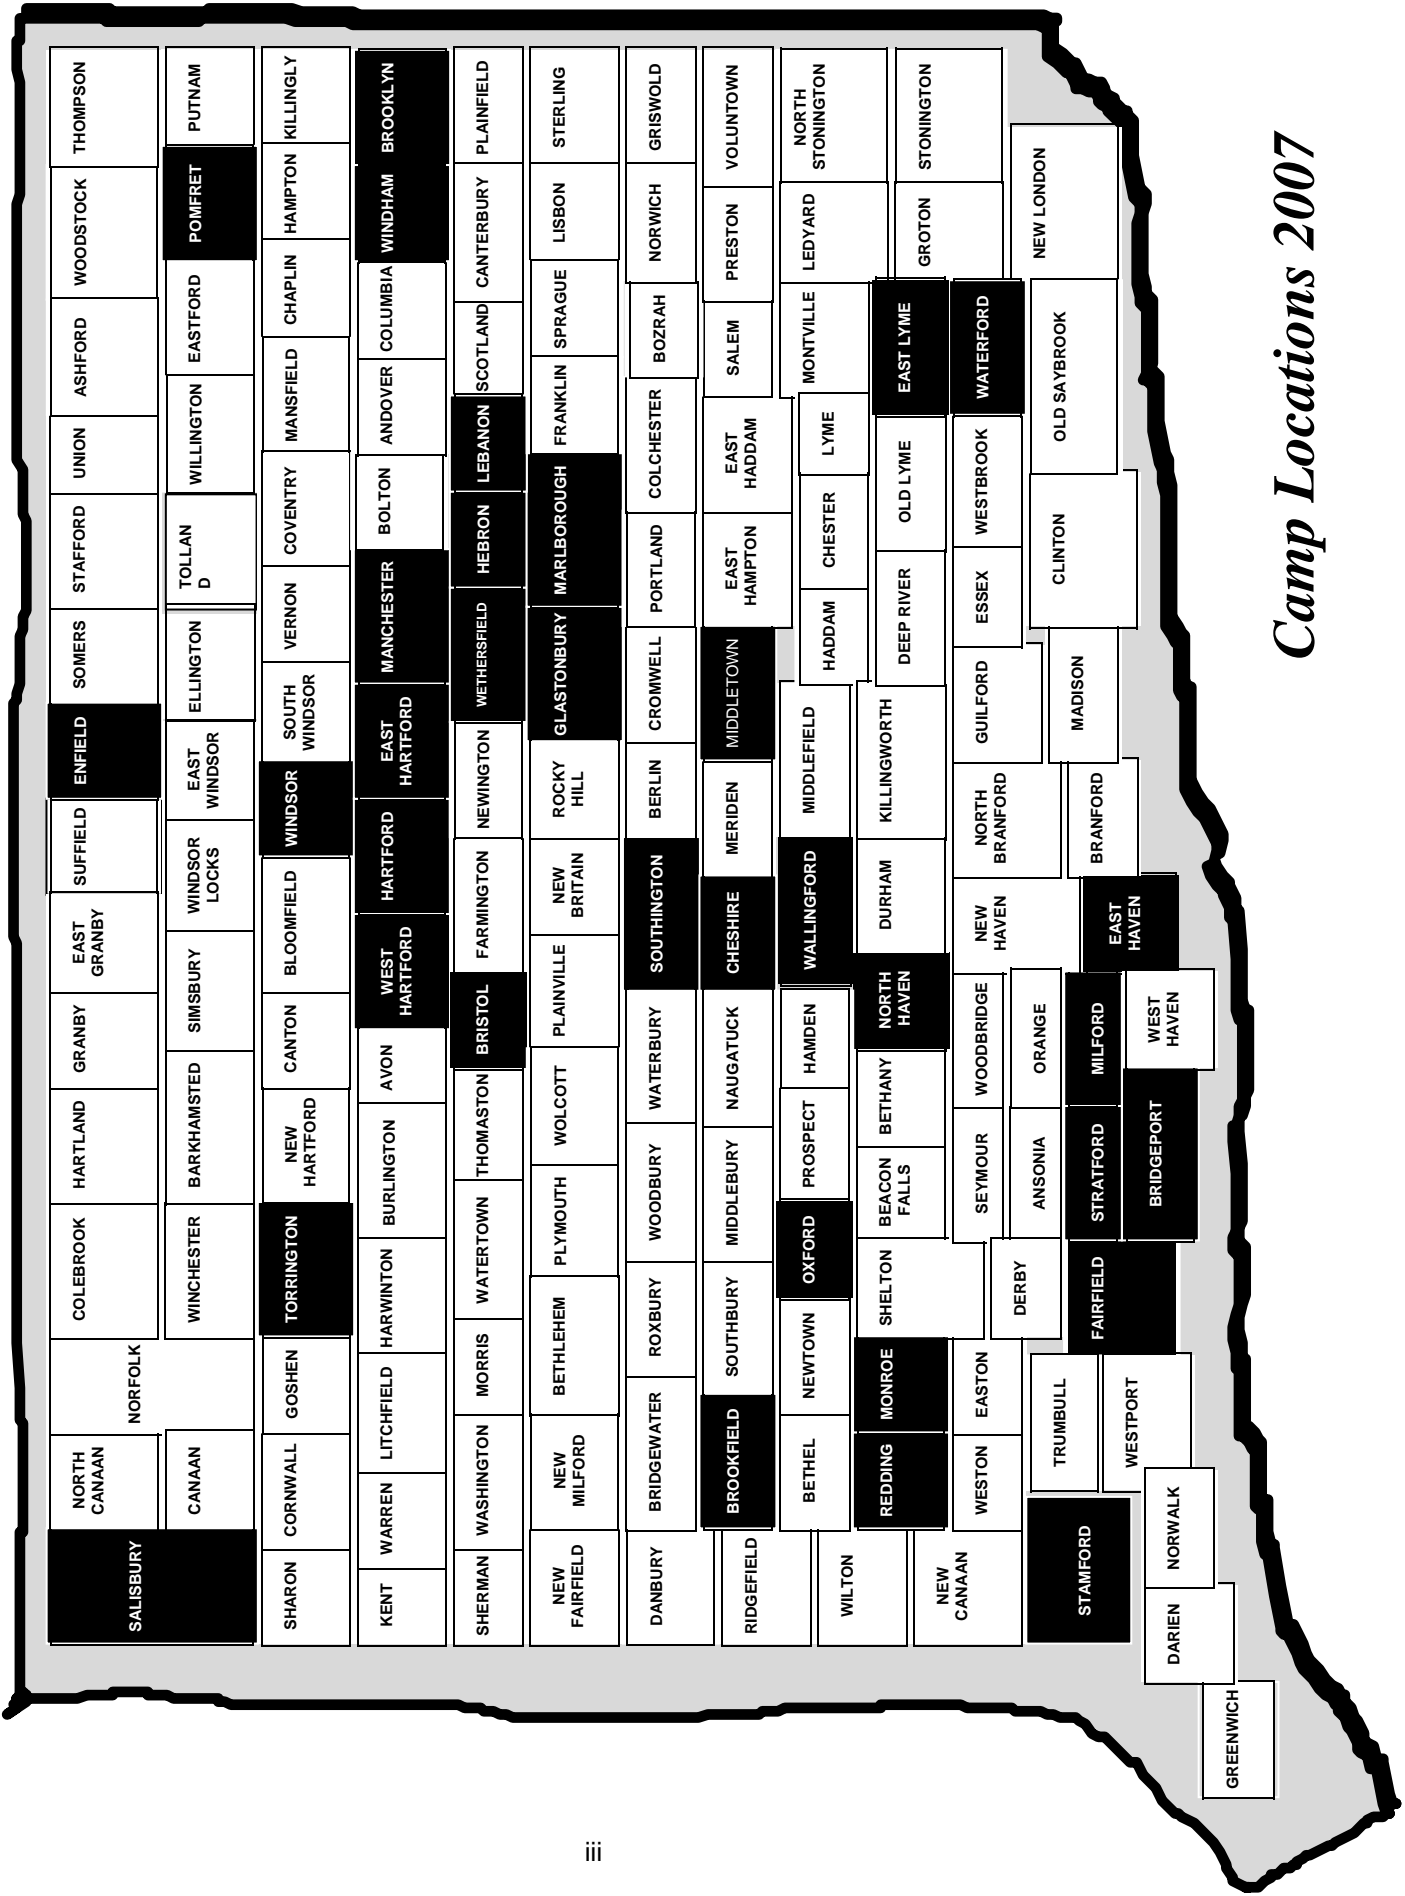

We are pleased to share with you this 2007 edition of the Directory of Summer Camps and Programs for Exceptional Children in Connecticut. Please feel free to duplicate any or all of this directory for dissemination.

Users of this directory should contact each camp or program directly to ascertain suitability for an individual child's needs. Inclusion in this directory does not indicate that the camp has been reviewed and/or approved by SERC or the Connecticut State Department of Education. The listings are provided solely as a resource for general information.

Please do not hesitate to contact us if you have any questions, or if we can be of any assistance to you.

Sincerely,

Marianne Kirner
Director

RESOURCES FOR LOCATING A CAMP

The following are a few resources on the Internet that may help you locate potential camps for your child. If you don't have access to the Internet, you can call the National Information Center for Children and Youth with Disabilities at 1-800-695-0285 for information on camps in your area or have literature mailed to you.

www.acacamps.org: This interactive database sponsored by the American Camping Association lists over 2,000 ACA-accredited camps around the country.

www.intercamp.com: This site lists over 2,000 summer camps searchable by fee, location, special needs, websites, and more.

www.nichcy.org: This is the website of the National Information Center for Children and Youth with Disabilities. It lists camps for children with specific disabilities.

CHOOSING A SUMMER CAMP:

The Learning Disabilities Association of Missouri published the following guidelines in its newsletter. We think they are worth repeating in this document. Keeping in mind that children with disabilities often have perceptual or behavioral problems, some important issues to consider include:

- The minimum age for counselors.
- The ratio of campers to counselors.
- The background of the camp director and program director.
- Medical staff and expertise available.
- Program orientation (i.e., do campers go to activities with counselors and cabinmates, individually or both?).
- What happens when a child does not want to participate in an activity, or is poor at a certain activity?
- How much flexibility is there concerning the level of activity at which a child participates (i.e., if he/she is 15 years old but cannot swim, does he/she have swimming instruction with cabinmates or with non-swimmers)?
- How sophisticated are the activities?
- What forms of discipline are used?
- How strict is the camp?
- How does the staff handle teasing, scapegoating, and rejection?
- Are children ever moved from one group to another?
- Are parents contacted if there is a concern about the child?
- On what basis would a decision be made to end a child's stay at camp? How much, if any, money would be refunded?
- Has the camp served children with disabilities before? How has it worked out?
- What were the attributes of children who adjusted most and least to the camp?
- What are the typical campers like?
- What are the camp's goals for its campers?

Some final questions to ponder may include:

- Is there any feedback provided at the end of the camp concerning the child's improvement in social, educational and/or physical skills? If so, is this report verbal or in writing?
- What are camp rules regarding visiting, writing, telephoning, and so on?
- What can parents share with the camp that would be helpful?
- What equipment would it be helpful to send?

Consideration of all these issues will make a more enjoyable camping experience for the camper, his/her family, and the camp itself. Use this guideline to help you decide on a camp this summer for your child with disabilities.

Six-week program.
Monday - Friday
9:00 a.m. - 2:30 p.m.

DESCRIPTION OF PROGRAM: MACH Camp builds its program around the performing and visual arts. Over forty children, ages six to eighteen, attend a six-week summer day camp for youth with special needs. The campers study theater, dance and movement, music, and the visual arts. A theme is chosen and is developed throughout the different artistic areas. All of these disciplines are featured in an original play that the children and staff perform at the end of camp showcase and open house. Students benefit from a low in-classroom ratio of three adults to every ten students and an outside of class ratio of two adults to every ten students. In addition to the camp director, the camp has a guidance counselor to work with students in smaller groups, as necessary. Students take part in recreational activities, including swimming and field trips. The camp provides breakfast and lunch.

EXCEPTIONALITIES ACCEPTED: All disabilities.

AGE LIMITS: 6 to 16 years.

TRANSPORTATION: Provided within the Bridgeport area.

ADMISSION POLICY: Pre-registration interview.
Referrals are accepted from the Department of Children and Families, Child Guidance, Park Project, and others.
